Math:

In math this week, we will continue classifying shapes by their lines and angles. We will also be using division to determine the fraction of a circle that an angle covers. This Friday, students will be tested on their mastery of 2 digit by digit multiplication with a short 12 problem quiz. Next Wednesday, 1/29 students will take the Mid-Module Assessment for Module 4. It will cover: 1) drawing and identifying geometric elements such as lines, points, line segments, angles, parallel lines, and perpendicular lines, 2) Using a protractor to draw & measure lines. 3) Determining the angle measure of a particular fraction of a circle. The second half of this, module which we will start next Thursday, will be spent using addition and subtraction to determine unknown measures of angles, and classifying two-dimensional figures based on their angles, sides, and lines of symmetry.

Science:

In science, we will be finishing our pinball machine Stem project. We will then use our pinball machine to explain how the speed of an object is related to the energy of that object. We will then learn about potential and kinetic energy through activity stations in class. We will also discuss collisions. We will learn how force, energy, and speed changes when objects collide.

Reading:

This week in reading, students will explore "Bridging the Gap" and Kim Becker's From Idea to Book. Students will then compare the organization of both My Librarian is a Camel to From Idea to Book. Then, students will make a text-to-self-connection by imagining they live in a community that does not have access to a library. After that, they will write a letter making a plan for books to be delivered to their community (text-to-self). Finally, students will take an AR test for My Librarian is a Camel.

Upcoming Dates:

Thursday, January 23rd - Pep Rally
Friday, January 24th - Midterm Reports available on-line for 6 week period
Wednesday, January 29th - February 1st - Anchorage Invitational Basketball Tournament
Friday, January 31st - Jane Brown, author of My Moon Wish Visit
February 17th - 21st - Winter Break, No School

Social Studies:

This week in social studies, students will continue learning about the 13 colonies of the United States. Next week, we will be starting a project, where each student will complete research on one particular colony.

Writing/Grammar

Students will discuss summarizing information. Students will analyze which details they should include in their summaries. Students will be practicing summarizing in class. Students will be assessed on their summarizing skills next week. In grammar, we will continue to work with frequently confused words.

HAVE A FABULOUS WEEK!
